Health & Welfare and Pension Enrolment

Frequently Asked Questions

1. Why does the Enrolment ask for the effective date of marital status/common-law co-habitation?

To establish the effective date of health & welfare coverage for the spouse/common-law and dependent children.
To establish the effective date of possible spousal entitlement to the member's pension.

2. Why are you asking if my spouse or dependent children have their own health, dental, and vision coverage?

When a member and their spouse both have benefit plans, they and their dependents are eligible for coverage under both plans. When a member and an ex-spouse both have benefit plans, their dependent child is eligible for coverage under both plans. In both cases, coverage is co-ordinated between the two plans. Review your booklet for advice regarding which plan to first submit your dependent child's claim.

3. Can I keep my spouse on the plan if we are going through the process of separation/divorce?

No, if you are separated or divorced, your spouse/common-law is not eligible for benefits.

4. I have legal guardianship of a child. What proof is required?

A copy of the legal custodianship/guardianship document must be provided.

5. My child is disabled. What proof is required for coverage under my plan?

Contact Coughlin & Associates Claims Department for direction specific to your group plan.

6. Can I add my parents/siblings as dependents for coverage under my plan?

No, only your spouse/common-law and dependent children are eligible for coverage.

7. Can I designate (appoint) multiple people as my beneficiary?

Yes, multiple people may be designated as your beneficiary. Each beneficiary may be allocated a portion of the fund so that the total of all percentage portions equals 100%. Your Pension beneficiary must be your spouse, if you have one, unless a specific government form is completed. Contact Coughlin & Associates for this form.

Example:

Beneficiary 1	33.4%
Beneficiary 2	33.3%
Beneficiary 3	33.3%
Total	100.0%
